MEMORANDUM DECISION

On July 13, 2007, Dennis J. Jacopetti ("Defendant") filed a Motion to Dismiss First and Second Causes of Action of Complaint to Determine Dischargeability of Debt, bearing Docket Control No. PA-2 (the "Motion"). For the reasons set forth below, the court will deny the Motion.

62

I. INTRODUCTION

The Defendant seeks to dismiss the first and second causes of action of the complaint in this adversary proceeding on the ground that the debt allegedly due by the Defendant to Van De Pol Enterprises, Inc. ("Plaintiff") was extinguished by operation of law when the Defendant received a bankruptcy discharge in this case in 1994.<sup>1</sup> The complaint contains only two causes of action, so the granting of the Motion would result in dismissal of this adversary proceeding.

The Defendant commenced this bankruptcy case on November 23, 1993, by the filing of a petition for relief under chapter 13 of the Bankruptcy Code. In 1994, the case was converted to a chapter 7 case on the Defendant's application. The Defendant received a bankruptcy discharge on June 3, 1994, and the case was closed on December 16, 1994.

The case was reopened in 2006 on the motion of the Plaintiff, who claimed to be an unsecured creditor of the Defendant. On November 30, 2006, the Plaintiff filed the complaint commencing this adversary proceeding. According to the Plaintiff, at the time the Defendant commenced this case as a chapter 13 case, in 1993, he deliberately omitted the Plaintiff and several other unsecured creditors from his schedules, in an attempt to bring himself within the then unsecured debt limit of $100,000 for chapter 13 eligibility. The Plaintiff contends that this conduct amounted to a false oath, and that if the Plaintiff

1. The case at that time was assigned Case No. 93-94830. The case was closed in 1994, and reopened in 2006, at which time it was transferred to the Sacramento Division of this court, and was assigned its current case number, No. 06-23654.

1 had received notice of the bankruptcy, it would have filed a 2 successful objection to the discharge. Thus, the Plaintiff
3 asserts that the Defendant is judicially estopped from asserting 4 the discharge as a defense, and that application of the discharge 5 to its claim would amount to a denial of due process.

6 On December 13, 2006, the Defendant filed an answer to the 7 complaint and asserted certain affirmative defenses, including 8 that the complaint fails to state a cause of action upon which 9 relief can be granted and that any obligation the Defendant may 10 have owed to the Plaintiff was extinguished by the Defendant's 11 bankruptcy discharge.

12 On July 13, 2007, the Defendant filed the Motion, together 13 with a memorandum of points and authorities and a number of 14 exhibits. On August 1, 2007, the Plaintiff filed opposition to 15 the Motion, and on August 8, 2007, the Defendant filed a 16 memorandum of points and authorities in reply. On August 15, 17 2007, the Motion came before the court for hearing, counsel 18 appeared and presented oral argument, and the matter was 19 submitted.

20 II. CONTENTIONS OF THE PARTIES

21 The Defendant seeks an order dismissing the Complaint under 22 Fed. R. Civ. P. 12(b)(6), incorporated in this proceeding by Fed.
23 R. Bankr. P. 7012(b), for failure to state a claim upon which 24 relief can be granted.

25 The Defendant's argument centers on the undisputed fact that 26 his chapter 7 case was at all times a "no-asset case;" that is, 27 that the notice by which creditors were advised of the case also 28 advised them not to file a proof of claim unless they later

1 received a notice to do so, that the chapter 7 trustee filed a 2 no-asset report after the conclusion of the meeting of creditors, 3 and the case was thereafter closed as a no-asset case, without 4 creditors ever being advised to file proofs of claim. It is also 5 undisputed that the debt allegedly owed to the Plaintiff was a 6 pre-petition debt. Thus, the argument goes, the debt was 7 discharged by operation of law when the Defendant received his 8 bankruptcy discharge on June 3, 1994. The Defendant cites 9 Beezley v. California Land Title Co., 994 F.2d 1433 (9th Cir.
10 1993).

11 The Defendant also relies on Lone Star Sec. & Video, Inc. v.
12 Gurrola (In re Gurrola), 328 B.R. 158 (9th Cir. BAP 2005), in 13 which the Bankruptcy Appellate Panel held that "the bankruptcy 14 discharge cannot be circumvented on equitable grounds" (328 B.R.
15 at 160), and thus, that the Plaintiff's judicial estoppel theory 16 must fail.

17 The Plaintiff responds that Beezley and Gurrola are 18 inapposite, and relies instead on Ford v. Ford (In re Ford), 159 19 B.R. 590 (Bankr. D.Or. 1993), in which the court held that a debt
20 otherwise covered by a discharge would be excepted from discharge 21 if the debtor obtained it by violating the creditor's right to 22 procedural due process.

23 The Defendant, in turn, replies that Ford is inapposite, and 24 that the facts of this case bring it within the holding of White 25 v. Nielsen (In re Nielsen), 383 F.3d 922 (9th Cir. 2004), with 26 the result that the discharge applies to the Plaintiff's claim.

1 III. ANALYSIS

2 This court has jurisdiction over the Motion pursuant to 28
3 U.S.C. §§ 1334 and 157(b)(1). The Motion is a core proceeding
4 under 28 U.S.C. § 157(b)(2)(I).

5 A. Standards for Dismissal under Rule 12(b)(6)

6 The United States Supreme Court has recently adopted a 7 "plausibility" standard for assessing Rule 12(b)(6) motions, 8 analyzing the complaint before it in terms of whether it
9 contained enough factual allegations, taken as true, to plausibly 10 suggest that the plaintiff was entitled to relief. Bell Atl.
11 Corp. v. Twombly, 127 S. Ct. 1955, 1965, 167 L. Ed. 2d 929, 945 12 (2007). "[W]e do not require heightened fact pleading of 13 specifics, but only enough facts to state a claim to relief that 14 is plausible on its face." 127 S. Ct. at 1974.

15 The Court did not disturb its earlier pronouncement in 16 Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416 U.S. 232, 94 S. Ct. 1683 (1974), that on a 17 motion to dismiss, "[t]he issue is not whether a plaintiff will 18 ultimately prevail but whether the claimant is entitled to offer 19 evidence to support the claims." 416 U.S. at 236. Thus, "a 20 well-pleaded complaint may proceed even if it appears 'that a 21 recovery is very remote and unlikely.'" Bell Atl. Corp., 127 S.
22 Ct. at 1965, quoting and characterizing Scheuer v. Rhodes, 416
23 U.S. at 236.

24 B. Effect of Defendant's Discharge on Plaintiff's Debt

25 The Defendant begins his analysis with In re Beezley,

26 / / /

27 / / /

28 / / /

1 supra,<sup>2</sup> for the proposition that, because his case was a no-asset 2 case, and because the Plaintiff's debt does not fall within the 3 terms of 11 U.S.C. § 523(a)(2), (4), or (6), the discharge per 4 force applies to the Plaintiff's debt. The court concludes, 5 instead, that this case turns on the requirement for procedural 6 due process, and for this reason, the Defendant's reliance on 7 Beezley is misplaced. Beezley deals only with application of the 8 discharge to an unlisted debt in situations where due process is 9 not at issue.

10 In Beezley, the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals held that in 11 a no-asset chapter 7 case, a debt of a type covered by 11 U.S.C.
12 § 523(a)(3)(A) is discharged, even though the creditor was 13 omitted from the schedules and did not receive notice of the 14 bankruptcy filing, and thus, that reopening of the case to 15 schedule the creditor would serve no purpose. 994 F.2d at 1434.

16 The Plaintiff distinguishes Beezley, arguing that here, the 17 Defendant omitted the Plaintiff and other creditors from his 18 schedules in a bad faith attempt to bring himself within the 19 chapter 13 debt limits, and in doing so, in bad faith deprived 20 the Plaintiff of his right to object to the Defendant's 21 discharge. The court agrees that Beezley does not govern the 22 outcome of this case.

23 Instead, the court concludes that this case fits squarely 24 within the holding of the Ford decision. Although the conduct of 25 the debtor in Ford was arguably more egregious than that of the 26

27 2. The Defendant also discusses at length In re Mendiola, 99 28 B.R. 864 (Bankr. N.D. Ill. 1989), which is to the same effect as Beezley.

1 Defendant in the present case, if this court finds in further 2 proceedings that the Defendant's conduct was sufficiently 3 egregious to have warranted a denial of his discharge, the Ford 4 holding will be on all fours.

5 In Ford, the court first rejected the creditor's argument
6 that the debt was nondischargeable as an omitted debt under 11 7 U.S.C. § 523(a)(3)(A). The court rightly observed that because 8 the case was a no-asset case, under Beezley, the debt did not 9 fall within the § 523(a)(3)(A) exception (159 B.R. at 591-92), 10 and further, that "[t]here is no other statutory basis under § 11 523 for excepting the debt from the discharge of § 727, . . . ."
12 Id. at 592. The same conclusions apply in this case.

13 However, the court in Ford went on to conclude that 14 application of the discharge to the debt in that case would 15 violate the procedural due process rights of the creditor.

16 The due process infirmity in the instant case is that 17 the plaintiff had no notice that her debt was subject 18 to discharge in bankruptcy, and therefore had no
19 opportunity to challenge that discharge. [Citation.]
20 Had the plaintiff received such timely notice, I am 21 convinced that she would have succeeded in preventing 22 the discharge of her debt or, if the discharge had 23 already been entered, obtaining revocation of the 24 discharge.

25 The plaintiff's right to protect her debt from 26 discharge was valuable. The debtor made no attempt to 27 give plaintiff notice of the bankruptcy, and 28 effectively prevented the plaintiff from coming into court to protect her rights. Declaring plaintiff's debt discharged under such circumstances violates the procedural due process guaranteed by the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution, which requires notice and an opportunity to be heard.
[Citation.]

159 B.R. at 594.

1 Similarly, in the present case, if the court finds that if 2 the Plaintiff had been given timely notice of the bankruptcy 3 filing, it would have been successful in objecting to the 4 Defendant's discharge, the court must conclude that application 5 of the discharge to the Plaintiff's debt would amount to a denial 6 of the Plaintiff's right to due process.

7 The Defendant argues that the Plaintiff's theory in this 8 case is identical to the one rejected in the Nielsen case. The 9 court in Nielsen followed the Beezley decision, and held that 10 because the case before it was a no-asset case, § 523(a)(3)(A) 11 did not protect the creditor's claim from the discharge. 383 12 F.3d at 927. The court also held that because the creditor could 13 not establish that the discharge was obtained through fraud, she 14 was not entitled to revoke it. "For Ms. White to prove that the 15 Nielsens' discharge was 'obtained through' the fraud, she must at 16 least show that, but for the fraud, the discharge would not have 17 been granted. That she cannot do." 383 F.3d at 925 (emphasis 18 added). Finally, the court rejected the creditor's due process 19 argument for similar reasons. "Ms. White's due process claim 20 fails because nothing was taken from her. If she has a 21 dischargeable debt, its discharge was not brought about by the 22 lack of notice. If she had a non-dischargeable debt, she still 23 has it. The lack of notice had no effect on her." 383 F.3d at 24 927.

25 The difference here is that the Defendant is alleged to have 26 deliberately omitted several creditors, including the Plaintiff, 27 in order to orchestrate his financial situation to fit within the 28 chapter 13 debt limits. The court is not prepared to conclude

1 that this conduct could not possibly have prevented the Debtor's 2 discharge. On the contrary, if the Defendant is found to have 3 deliberately made a false oath that was material, and if such 4 conduct rises to a level sufficient to warrant denial of the 5 discharge, then the court must also conclude that the Plaintiff 6 was denied his due process right to challenge the discharge.
7 Nielsen itself suggests this conclusion.

8 Had [the creditor], in her proceeding to revoke the 9 discharge, shown that, in truth, there were assets, or 10 that there was some reason that the Nielsens should not have been discharged, this would be quite a different case.

11 In re Nielsen, 383 F.3d at 926 (emphasis added).

12 To dismiss the action on the present motion might well mean 13 rewarding a debtor for manipulating the information on his 14 schedules in an attempt to keep the most boisterous creditor from 15 participating in the case until it was too late to deny or revoke 16 the discharge. This result would be contrary to every principle 17 of fairness, and certainly, contrary to the requirement of due 18 process.

19 This decision should not be construed as holding that the 20 Defendant's discharge may be revoked. The bar date for a 21 complaint to revoke the discharge passed long ago (11 U.S.C. § 22 727(e)), and it applies regardless of whether the discharge was 23 procured through fraud. In re Ford, supra, 159 B.R. at 593.
24 Nor should this decision be interpreted to mean that if a debtor 25 manipulates his schedules so as to keep a particular creditor 26 from participating in the case, that alone will be grounds for 27 excepting that creditor's debt from the discharge. Nielsen holds 28 to the contrary.

1        Rather, the court's holding here is that if the Plaintiff
2 can prove that the Defendant's discharge would have been denied 3 or revoked if the Plaintiff had had notice in time to object, 4 then it will have succeeded where the creditor in Nielsen 5 failed--it will have succeeded in demonstrating that the 6 Defendant's failure to schedule it changed the outcome of the 7 case. In that circumstance, the Plaintiff will have succeeded in 8 showing that it was deprived of a valuable right--the right to 9 protect its claim from discharge, and the requirement for due 10 process will mandate that the discharge be determined not to 11 apply to that claim.

12        Similar considerations apply in the court's analysis of the 13 Plaintiff's claim of judicial estoppel. The court recognizes the 14 holding of the Gurrola case, that estoppel theories may not be 15 used to circumvent the discharge. However, the decision itself 16 contains limiting language. "The gravamen of our analysis is 17 that § 524(a) eliminates the revival of the discharged debt as a 18 remedy for post-petition misconduct." Ibid. (emphasis added).
19 The decision did not address the issue presented in this case; 20 namely, whether the Defendant's pre-petition conduct can form the 21 basis for a successful judicial estoppel argument. The same 22 judge who authored the Gurrola decision had earlier suggested in 23 dicta, in a case involving the effect of a discharge on an 24 omitted creditor, "the possibility of imposing judicial estoppel 25 against a party who plays 'fast and loose' with the court." See 26 Paine v. Griffin (In re Paine), 283 B.R. 33, 40 (9th Cir. BAP 27 2002).

28 / / /

1 In Gurrola, the debtor fairly obtained his discharge. In 2 the instant case, it is asserted that the Defendant procured his 3 discharge through fraud. The fraud was not discovered within a 4 year of entry of the discharge, and thus, the discharge was and 5 is insulated from being revoked. The court is not prepared to 6 expand the Gurrola holding to these facts. When a discharge is 7 fraudulently procured, it does not receive the protection
8 afforded by Gurrola, and consideration of equitable estoppel 9 principles is not precluded.

10 In short, the court is not prepared to hold that, under the 11 facts of this case, judicial estoppel cannot possibly apply to 12 prevent the application of the Defendant's discharge to the 13 Plaintiff's debt.

14 IV. CONCLUSION

15 In any event, however, the court concludes that, regardless 16 of the applicability of judicial estoppel, if the court is 17 persuaded in further proceedings that the discharge would have 18 been denied had the Plaintiff had timely notice, it will also 19 conclude that application of the discharge to the Plaintiff's 20 debt would offend the requirement of procedural due process.

21 For the reasons set forth above, the court will issue an 22 order denying the Motion.
